

No, we should not allow cellular use aboard aircraft. Even if it's not an issue of safety and interference with other electronic devices, it's the principle that a person talking on a cell phone will infringe upon other passenger's space. I prefer not to hear everyone's cell phone conversations. When you're on an airplane, you don't have many choices to relocate somewhere else to get privacy...you're stuck with the person next to you talking on the cell phone. No thanks.